How to Read This Report

This is a map of how two charts interact — not a verdict on whether you belong together. Astrology describes patterns and potentials; what you do with them is yours.

Everything here is mutual. There is no single person to blame and no one to fix. Where a pattern shows up, it lives between you — and it shifts when both of you move. Start with the page at a glance, then follow whatever pulls you. There is no wrong order.

Some contacts here are called challenging. That word means work, not doom. The bonds that grow people are rarely frictionless; a square or an opposition often marks exactly where two lives push each other to become more. Read every hard contact as an invitation, and every easy one as a gift to use rather than take for granted.

- ◆ The connection at a glance — the whole story on one page

OPENING

Your Connection at a Glance

Read as a love story between two charts: where you draw close, where you spark, and where the work that grows a couple lives.

Communication flows effortlessly between one. One person's identity enhances the other's ability to think and express themselves clearly.

One person's identity feels disrupted by the other's need for change. This creates exciting but challenging energy that requires flexibility.

Core self creates friction with mentorship. One person's vitality challenges the other's wounds, stimulating growth through creative tension.

Compatibility Index: This connection shows Dynamic Growth energy with 48% harmony and 52% growth-oriented tension.

COMPATIBILITY PROFILE

*Here the connection is broken into eight measurable strands and a banded index.
Read it as a profile, not a grade — the number describes how active the bond is, not whether it is good.*

- ◆ Eight-category compatibility profile, banded
- ◆ Temperaments — elements, modes, and what each leads with
- ◆ Each partner's love profile and Venus signature

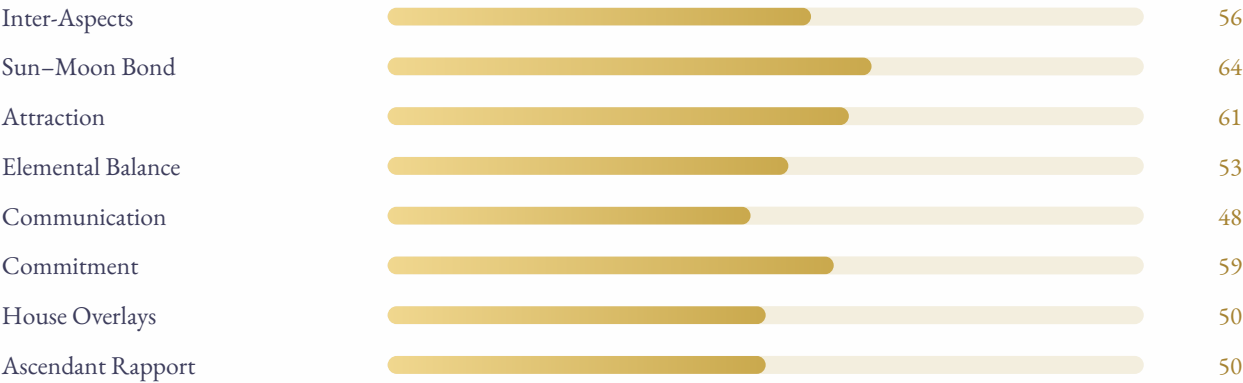

COMPATIBILITY PROFILE

Compatibility Profile

12

Significant

Eight strands of connection, each scored, gathered into one banded index.

This index measures how strongly the two charts activate each other — the intensity of the connection, not its happiness or worth. A low score is not a failed couple; a quiet, low-friction bond can be the most durable. A high score means a lot is in motion, for better and harder both. Read it as a profile, never a grade.

COMPATIBILITY PROFILE

Temperaments

What each of you leads with — the elemental and modal weather you each bring.

Before any single contact between your charts is read, each of you arrives carrying a kind of inner weather — a default temperament made of element and modality that shapes how you reach toward the world and toward each other. Knowing the climate each of you brings makes the meeting points easier to honor and the friction points easier to forgive.

Sofia — Water · Mutable

WATER

A water-dominant nature relates through feeling, attunement, and the unspoken current that runs beneath words. You tend to read the emotional temperature of a room instantly and bond most deeply when you feel safe to be vulnerable. The gift is empathy and depth; the growth edge is keeping a sense of where you end and the other begins, so closeness never costs you yourself.

MUTABLE

A mutable temperament adapts. You tend to read the situation, bend toward what's needed, and keep the relationship flowing around obstacles rather than through them. This brings ease and versatility; it works best when you also let yourself be pinned down to a clear yes, so adaptability doesn't blur into avoidance.

Daniel — Fire · Fixed

FIRE

A fire-dominant nature relates with warmth, momentum, and a need to feel inspired. You tend to lead with enthusiasm, speak your wants directly, and want a partner who can match your spark rather than smother it. The gift here is vitality and courage; the growth edge is remembering that not every feeling needs to be acted on at once.

FIXED

A fixed temperament sustains. Once you commit, you hold — through loyalty, persistence, and a deep dislike of being rushed or pushed. This brings remarkable staying power; it asks for conscious flexibility, since the same constancy that keeps love alive can harden into stubbornness when change is genuinely needed.

Fire warms what water feels, and water gives fire something tender to protect — a pairing of spark and depth that can be electric or overwhelming. The fire partner brings courage and forward motion; the water partner brings emotional truth and intuition. The work is pacing: fire learning to slow down for feelings it can't see, water learning not to take fire's heat personally.

Love Profiles

Sofia — Venus Aquarius

Quality Time

One's Venus in Aquarius expresses love through friendship, intellectual connection, and respecting independence.

Daniel — Venus Leo

Words of Affirmation

One's Venus in Leo expresses love dramatically and generously. One needs admiration and give grand romantic gestures.

THE CONNECTION

The contacts that carry the most weight in everyday life — luminaries, attraction, mind, the slow gravity of Saturn. Each is read in both directions, because no contact lands the same on both people.

THE CONNECTION

Sun & Moon — The Core Bond

The luminary contacts decide whether two people feel like home to each other. Read both directions: a contact lands differently on the planet person than on the angle person.

DEPTH

The undercurrents — nodal pull, the asteroids of commitment and desire, and the old wound each of you touches in the other. Significant and magnetic, but never a verdict on love.

- ◆ Karmic contacts — nodes and Vertex, three different agendas
- ◆ Juno, Eros, and Psyche — commitment, desire, recognition
- ◆ Chiron — the wound each of you touches and heals

DEPTH

Karmic Contacts

Nodal and Vertex contacts carry pull and significance — not a promise of love. Three different agendas live here.

Some contacts between two charts carry a particular gravity — a sense of pull, recognition, or significance that can feel larger than ordinary chemistry. Read them as markers of meaning and momentum, not as proof of destiny: they describe why a connection feels weighty, not whether it will last.

THE NORTH NODE — GROWTH DIRECTION

The North Node points toward who you are each becoming — the unfamiliar, stretching direction your growth wants to take. When a partner's planets touch your North Node, they tend to pull you toward that evolutionary edge, which is rarely comfortable and almost always developmental. This is the partner who, for better or harder, helps you grow into your future self rather than rest in who you've already been.

Venus * North Node

Affection gently supports soul purpose. One person's love creates opportunities for the other's karmic path to flourish with conscious effort.

Mars * North Node

3.3°

Action gently supports destiny. One person's motivation creates opportunities for the other's karmic growth and soul evolution.

Jupiter □ North Node

3.9°

Expansion and life direction clash constructively. One person's expansion pushes against the other's soul purpose, creating motivation for development.

Uranus □ North Node

4.0°

Uniqueness creates friction with life direction. One person's uniqueness challenges the other's life direction, stimulating growth through creative tension.

North Node ♂ Sun

5.0°

Soul purpose and life purpose face each other across the relationship. One person's karmic path polarizes with the other's identity, creating dynamic tension.

North Node ♂ Mars

2.4°

Destiny opposes action. One person's karmic path conflicts with the other's drive, requiring integration of soul purpose with assertive expression.

North Node * Saturn

0.1°

Destiny gently supports structure. Important lessons arise through commitment and responsibility.

Chiron □ North Node

5.4°

Mentorship creates friction with karmic path. One person's healing challenges the other's karmic path, stimulating growth through creative tension.

THE SOUTH NODE — FAMILIAR GROUND

The South Node holds what is already deeply known — the comfortable, instinctive patterns you arrived with. When a partner's planets touch your South Node, the connection often carries an instant familiarity, a 'we've met before' ease that can feel like coming home. The gift is profound comfort; the caution is that the same familiarity can keep you both circling old ground instead of moving forward.

Venus △ South Node

2.9°

Love and inherited talents blend effortlessly. One person's affection enhances the other's inherited talents with natural grace and support.

Mars △ South Node

3.3°

Action supports past patterns naturally. One person's motivation flows beautifully with the other's karmic gifts, creating strength from familiar ground.

Jupiter ☐ South Node

3.9°

Creative tension between Growth and inherited talents. One person's growth conflicts with the other's past patterns, requiring active effort to integrate.

Uranus ☐ South Node

4.0°

Innovation and karmic gifts clash constructively. One person's revolution pushes against the other's inherited talents, creating motivation for development.

South Node ♄ Sun

5.0°

Past-life connections merge with identity. This relationship has strong karmic history and familiar patterns.

South Node ♄ Mars

2.4°

Past patterns merge with action. Old ways of pursuing goals feel comfortable but may limit growth.

South Node ♄ Saturn

0.1°

Past patterns support structure naturally. Karmic foundation supports commitment and responsibility.

THE VERTEX — FATED ENCOUNTER

The Vertex marks the quality of a turning-point meeting — encounters that feel arranged by something beyond coincidence, that arrive at exactly the right or wrong moment and change the course of things. When a partner's planets touch your Vertex, the meeting itself tends to carry that fated charge, distinct from the Nodes' longer soul-curriculum. It speaks to the significance of the encounter, not to its guaranteed outcome.

No major contacts in this area fall within orb for this couple — a quiet channel rather than a loud one.

These karmic contacts indicate genuine pull, recognition, and significance — but significance is not the same as a guarantee, and a connection that feels fated still asks to be chosen, tended, and consciously built by both of you.

MARRIAGE & EROS

Juno, Eros & Psyche

The asteroids refine the story: commitment, desire, and the feeling of being truly seen.

Beyond the planets, a handful of asteroids add fine detail to the picture of a bond — the texture of commitment, the charge of erotic fascination, the way a connection can feel quietly significant to the soul. Read them as refinements that color what the planets already say; they sharpen the portrait, they do not redraw it.

Er☾ Eros Δ Moon

0.7°

This easy Eros contact suggests a natural, uncomplicated erotic spark — desire that flows rather than fights. There tends to be playful, mutual attraction here, a chemistry that feels affirming and alive. It is the kind of charge that warms a relationship without overheating it.

☉Ps Sun ♂ Psyche

This sensitive Psyche contact can heighten attunement to the point of over-identification, where one of you feels the other's wounds as your own. The closeness is real and meaningful, but it asks for boundaries so empathy doesn't blur into losing yourself. Named clearly, this sensitivity becomes a source of healing rather than confusion.

These asteroid contacts never override the deeper structural signals of a chart — Saturn's commitment, Pluto's intensity, Neptune's idealism still set the foundation — and no asteroid can prove soul recognition or guarantee a lasting bond.

DEPTH

Chiron — Wounds & Healing

Each of you touches an old wound in the other. Handled well, that is where the deepest healing happens.

Sun □ Chiron

2.8°

Core self creates friction with mentorship. One person's vitality challenges the other's wounds, stimulating growth through creative tension.

Moon △ Chiron

1.2°

Emotions support healing naturally. One person's feelings flow beautifully with the other's wisdom from wounds, creating nurturing understanding and growth.

Jupiter ♃ Chiron

5.1°

Growth meets healing in a powerful blend. One person's expansion inspires the other's wisdom from wounds, creating meaningful teaching and understanding.

Chiron △ Moon

4.6°

Healing energy supports emotional well-being. One person's wisdom brings comfort and understanding to the other's feelings.

Chiron ♆ Neptune

4.8°

Healing needs conflict with spiritual idealism. This creates tension between reality and transcendence.

Chiron Δ Pluto

3.4°

Healing energy supports transformation. One person's wisdom facilitates the other's positive regeneration.

Chiron $\square$ North Node

5.4°

Mentorship creates friction with karmic path. One person's healing challenges the other's karmic path, stimulating growth through creative tension.

★ SYNTHESIS & OUTLOOK

The Year Ahead

How the next twelve months are likely to feel for the two of you, month by month.

The year ahead is read through transits moving across your relationship chart — the shared pattern that describes the bond as its own living entity. These are weather forecasts, not verdicts: each window names a season the two of you may move through together. Slow outer-planet transits to your angles, luminaries, and Venus tend to mark the turning points, while faster passes color the months in between. Read what follows as invitations and tendencies, never as fixed outcomes — how you meet each season is yours to shape.

2026-08-01 TO 2026-08-31

Flowing

♃ Jupiter Conjunction The Davison Chart Ascendant

Jupiter crossing your relationship chart's Ascendant may expand how the relationship shows up in the world. This invites visibility, fresh beginnings, and a more confident shared identity.

2027-01-01 TO 2027-01-31

Flowing

♃ Jupiter Trine The Davison Chart Midheaven

Jupiter in easy aspect to your relationship chart's Midheaven may lift the relationship's shared direction and public standing. A season that rewards ambition and invites the two of you to build something visible and lasting together.

Flowing

♅ Uranus Conjunction The Composite Chart Sun

Transiting Uranus meeting your relationship chart's Sun may electrify the relationship's sense of purpose, inviting freedom and reinvention. Change is the theme; flexibility serves you both.

SYNTHESIS & OUTLOOK

Living It Well

Hold the hard contacts as the places a love is asked to grow, and the easy ones as gifts to spend rather than save. What you build from here is yours to choose.

Everything here is mutual. There is no single person to blame and no one to fix. Where a pattern shows up, it lives between you — and it shifts when both of you move. Start with the page at a glance, then follow whatever pulls you. There is no wrong order.

This report illuminates patterns and potentials between two charts. It does not predict the future, judge the worth of either person, or decide whether a relationship should continue. Those choices belong to you.

REFERENCE

Glossary & Method Notes

A short, honest account of how this report is built — the methods, the orbs, and the places where astrology has to make a judgment call.

HOUSE SYSTEM

House overlays in this report use the Whole-Sign house system by default, where each sign is one house. Whole-Sign keeps overlay placements stable even when a birth time is slightly uncertain, which matters more in synastry than degree-level cusp precision. If a different system was requested, it is named on the chart pages.

ORBS

An orb is how far from exact an aspect can be and still count. We use tighter orbs for minor aspects and the asteroids, wider ones for the Sun, Moon, and the angles. The tighter the orb, the louder the contact — every aspect table lists its exact orb.

COMPOSITE VS DAVISON

Both charts treat the relationship as a single entity. The composite is a mathematical average of the two charts — the midpoint of every planet. The Davison chart is a real chart cast for the midpoint in time and the midpoint in space, so it has an actual date and place. They usually agree; where they diverge, the composite leans symbolic and the Davison leans concrete. When both highlight the same theme, the report flags it as confirmed.

INTENSITY, NOT HAPPINESS

The compatibility index, following the work of Ciro Discepolo, measures how strongly two charts activate each other — not whether the relationship is happy or 'right.' Hard contacts raise the number as much as soft ones, because they put more in motion. A high score means an eventful bond; a low score means a gentle one. Neither is better than the other.

INNER-PLANET COMPOSITE PLACEMENTS

The composite chart takes the nearer midpoint of each planet independently. For Mercury and Venus, which never stray far from the Sun, this occasionally places the composite point on the far side of the composite Sun — a position no real chart could hold. Where this happens, treat the inner-planet composite placement as symbolic rather than literal. The Davison chart is immune to this, since it is a real chart for a real moment — one of the reasons we include both.

SUN-SIGN 'DESTINY' MATCH

When both partners' Suns share the same modality — cardinal, fixed, or mutable — some compatibility methods flag a special resonance. This report derives that flag from the modality match itself rather than from any single library field, because the underlying value is unreliable when the two Suns sit in same-modality signs. Read it as a gentle echo, not a cosmic guarantee.
